Extra Caution Urged on Roads During Harvest Season

Agriculture Commissioner Doug Goehring says the advent of harvest season means both equipment operators and motorists should be extra careful on highways and rural roads.

"We will soon be seeing much more harvesting equipment out on the road as producers and custom combiners move from field to field," Goehring said. "This equipment is slower and less maneuverable than ordinary cars and trucks. Please try to give the operators a little extra room."

Goehring said producers and custom combiners need to check the condition of county and township roads before setting out.

"This year's flooding and abnormally wet conditions have closed many rural roads and damaged many more," he said. "Pulling over on the shoulder to let traffic pass may be more difficult than usual because of the deteriorated roads in many parts of the state."

Goehring said producers also need to be more careful and more aware of others using the road.

"I am frankly surprised at some of the complaints we've been getting at the Department of Agriculture," he said. "One caller said they hope they never again see what they did last year when a combine with a 36-foot header was heading down the road.
That header should have been on a trailer."
